My name is Lisa Thompson, and I have been teaching first through fourth grade students since the early 2000s, the past two years at Bloom Early Education.

My Bachelor of Science from the University of Idaho is in natural resources which informs my approach to science teaching. My Master's in Teaching is from Washington State University (Go Cougs!).

When I'm not at school, you'll find me gardening in my yard, trying to keep my dogs from trampling the flowers, or working on home improvement projects with my husband. I also love to bake and I sometimes share the goodies with my class. I am a bookworm, and I share my favorite children's literature with my students.

I believe teachers should equip their students with knowledge and skills that will help them grow into life-long learners who are critical thinkers. I enjoy project based learning, and love seeing how the students use their knowledge in the final project. My classroom is a safe, calm, welcoming place where students learn that differences are strengths.

I am so excited to be at Bloom Academy in a beautiful new space and can't wait to see what the year holds!
